

Absence

The desert leaves no trace in this windswept land you can see for miles
you can dream of sand

I live in absence now
city walls
no one recalls
the day you left

The trees are tall and proud nearly touch the sky
the red cloth will ride on the wind of pride

I live in absence now
city walls
no one recalls
the day you left

I live in absence now
city walls
no one recalls
the day you left

Moonbeams shine
sea breeze blow
clouds will rush
nothing will show

I'm exalted loneliness
miles and miles
I'm so far away

We live under water
like gargoyles in rain
the silence calling out like an empty shell

I live in absence now
city walls
no one recalls
the day you left

I live in absence now
city walls
no one recalls
the day you left